Final Milestone Report

May 29, 2017

Intro:

The below report is an extensive breakdown of milestones performed in the last few months with the goal of offering improvements to the Ladybug House website from a technical standpoint. The ideas and suggestions presented are ones that shouldn't be extremely difficult to implement into the already working website but rather to give it support and accomplish the goals that Ladybug House is striving to achieve. With these three milestone reports, there should be ample suggestions to help accomplish these desired goals.

In the Milestone 1 report, the idea was to obtain information on palliative care and information on other similar organizations that would be useful for making improvements to Ladybug House. The tool that was used to gather this information is called Issue Crawler. This tool crawls through the related websites that you input, and in our case this was palliative care websites, and sees which websites link to this topic. With the report from Issue Crawler, we are able to see several areas in which the Ladybug House website can be improved.

For Milestone 2, the tool that was used to generate the below information was the website tawdis.net. With this website, one enters in the URL of a website and returns a detailed report of the syntax on the page. Using the Ladybug House URL, the below report goes through all the code of the Ladybug House home page and gives feedback on lines of code that could be causing issues. Going through this report, there were several areas in the websites code that are worth looking into for improvement including images on the page, user accessibility, and some general syntax improvements. The desired target audience for this report is both for those who are familiarized with web coding as well as those whom might be hearing coding terms for the first time. At the very bottom of this report is the full line by line report from tawdis.net on LadybugHouse.org for further examination if desired.

With Milestone 3, using the tool Axure, the below mockup shows what the volunteer page for Ladybug House would look like using influences from other organizations that implement a volunteer page on their website. The main influence for the below mockup comes from the organization Food Life Line (foodlifeline.org). Ideally, the goal of the page would encourage visitors of the website to feel compelled to help out the LBH organization and give back to the community.

In the following reports, there will be detailed and thorough feedback on the information given. The overall goal in these reports is to have Ladybug House increase its SEO among the community and also provide more accessibility within the website.

Milestone 1:

Issue Crawl

After running an issue crawl on the first 20 sites that came up on Google after searching the terms "palliative care" and "children." I was able to get a nice cluster web back that I think will be helpful going forward with finding ways in which we as a class can improve the LBH website. Based off the data from the crawl I performed, the first thing that I noticed was that the majority of the websites displayed were either .org or .gov as their domain. One way I think we can use this to improve the LBH website is by incorporating more links to these other websites within the LBH site. This could help LBH look more professional by linking other reputable websites that deal with palliative care. It can also serve as a way to direct visitors to these other sites to learn more information on palliative care before donating to LBH.
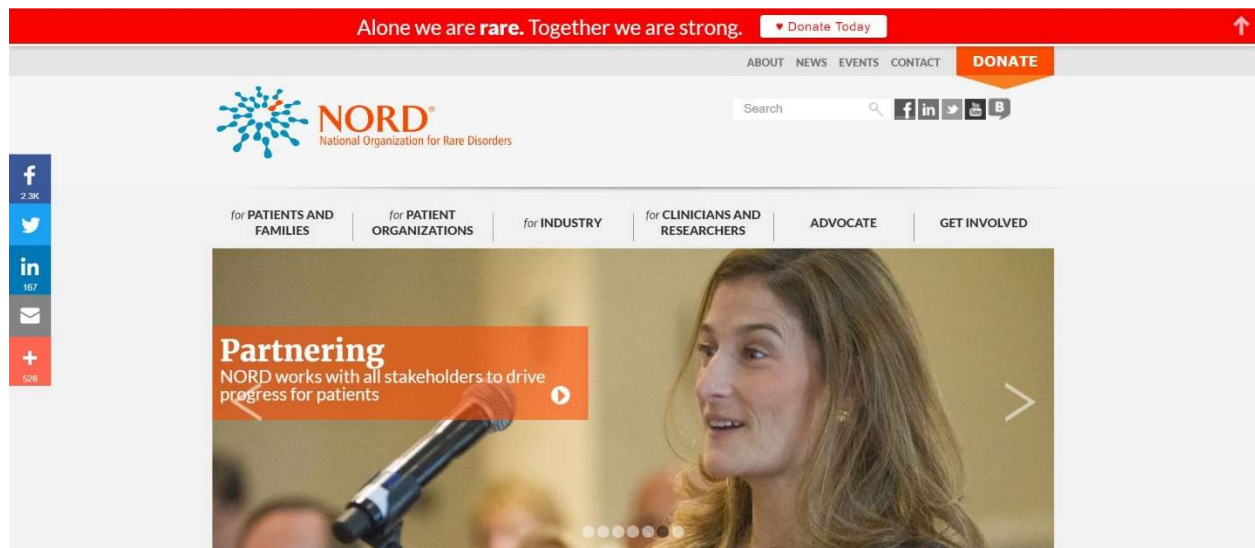

Suggestions:

- Add anchor text links throughout LBH that connect visitors to other similar websites that deal with palliative care for patients.
    - This will help educate visitors on what palliative care is and how it can help the lives of patients.
    - This also will help the SEO by having these links because it improves your page rank by having more links within your website.
- Try to build backlinks with other reputable websites.
    - Backlinks are links to your website from third party website. This significantly improves your page rank with Google allowing your site to gain more visibility when searching with Google.
    - Other palliative care websites and/or other local organizations may be will to add LBH backlink to their site.
    - Some suggested of possible patterns could be:
        - National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization
            - Website: https://www.nhpco.org/
        - Seattle Children's Hospital
            - Website: http://www.seattlechildrens.org/
        - Washington State Health Care Authority
            - Website: https://www.hca.wa.gov/
        - Washington Health Plan Finder
            - Website: https://www.wahealthplanfinder.org
        - Family Caregiver Alliance
            - Website: https://www.caregiver.org/
- The National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization website that was listed in the crawl seems like it would be a good site in particular to send visitors of LBH to so they can learn more about what LBH is trying to do with peoples donations.
    - This should come off as more professional to visitors of the site when they are directed to another organization to receive more information on palliative care.

National Organization of Rare Disorders:

An organization that was included in the issue crawl was NORD (National Organization of Rare Disorders). Viewing this website, there are a lot of elements to their webpage that I think LBH could benefit from adopting. The first thing that I noticed was that the option to donate was not as upfront to the user. The option was still clearly visible but was also not overbearing for visitors of the site. I feel like users appreciate this approach a lot more as it allows them to settle into the website and discover more information about the organization before being asked to donate to their cause.
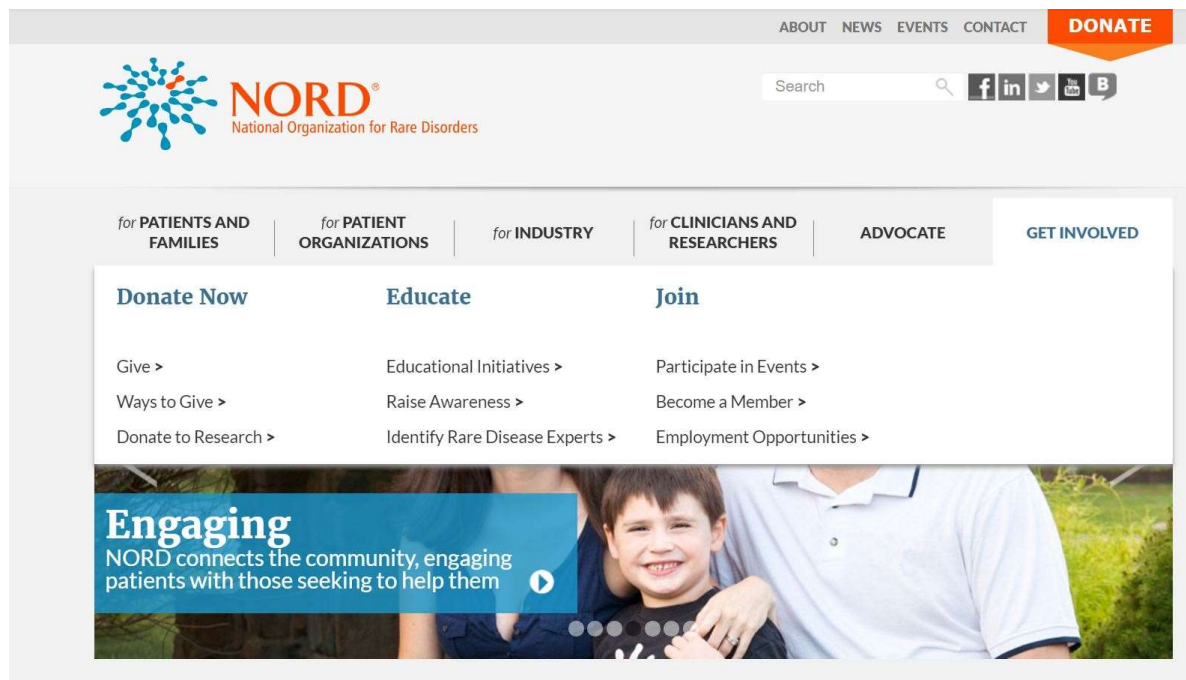

Another aspect of the donate option that I thought this site did well was that after a few minutes browsing the page, a small banner appeared at the top of the page with a message for donating. The banner and message didn't impede on the users experience on the page and I also felt like it was a good balance of reminding the user of the need the site has for donations without being too pushy.

Education:

Something that I have also noticed with several of these non-profit sites is that they offer a section on "education" which allows the user to learn more about their cause. NORD offers this under their "Get Involved" tab on the home page.

Another non-profit site that practices this is the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization (NHPCO). With this seeming to be a recurring theme among organizations like these, I feel like having LBH adding this to their website will greatly improve the credibility of the site and allow for visitors to feel more comfortable donating to a cause they fully know about.

Milestone 2:

Images with ALT Tags:

1.1.1 - Non-text Content
Images	Images without "alt" attribute ℹ️	[H37]	✖	3
	Images with suspicious alt (file name, size in kb,...) ℹ️	[F30]	✖	3
	Images that may require a long description ℹ️	[H45]	⚠️	4

Looking through the report for Ladybug House, the first issue that comes up is the alt tags for the images on the website. There are several Images that don't have alt tags associated with them which needs to be added. The biggest reason the alt tags need to be added in is that they are used by screen readers for the visually impaired to tell them what is on the screen. The screen reader will read the alt tags and say them to the users who need this service. Without the alt tags, the sight to be less accessible to those with vision impairments which is something we don't want. Below you can see the source of the image is present but no alt tag. The alt tag is also important for search engines as it helps identify what's on the page in your website. This will help increase Google's page ranking for Ladybug House as Google seems to value alt tags significantly. Google will scan the images on your webpage and return it in search results for those searching similar keywords in your alt tags. Ideally it would be good to include keywords in the alt tags as well such as an image of a caregiver having the alt tag of "Image of Palliative Caregiver Suzanne."

This is also true for images that have alt tags but the alt tags are not used properly. By having the alt tag be something like the file name including the extension for the image, it's not going to be readable for screen readers making them ineffective. Looking at the below image, the last line at the end show the alt tag of "picforwebsitepreview1.png." The screen reader is going to attempt to read that back to the user which either is going to be mumbled back or not read at all.

584. <figure id="thumbnail" class="loading content-fill"> ✖ ⚠️ <img data-src="https://static1.squarespace.com/static/5399c64ce4b0ce64b1989088/t/582e1beb2994caa4df035c6e/1479416843667/picforwebsitepreview1.png" image="https://static1.squarespace.com/static/5399c64ce4b0ce64b1989088/t/582e1beb2994caa4df035c6e/1479416843667/picforwebsitepreview1.pr dimensions="2500x1330" data-image-focal-point="0.5,0.5" alt="picforwebsitepreview1.png" /></figure>

Suggestions:

The alt tags that are used should be something short yet descriptive for the image.

635. ✗ <img data-preserve-html-node="true" style="height: 130px;" src="http://www.ladybughouse.org/assets/logo.png">

For the Ladybug House logo image that is shown above in line 635, the alt tag should read something like alt="Image of Ladybug House Logo". With the image for line 584 of the "picofwebsitepreview1.png" the alt tag should be something like alt="Image of Website Preview".

Event Handlers:

While still on the topic of accessibility, issue that was visible was the dependence of event handlers on some elements on the page. The problem with relying on device dependent event handlers is that it requires the user to have either a mouse or trackpad to trigger the event. That means that users who aren't able to use a mouse or a trackpad are not able to participate in that action on the page. Looking below to the line where the event handler is taking place, we see that it is allowing access to the "About Us" page of the website. The line that reads onclick data-href="/about-us/" requires the user to click with their mouse on the About Us link. This basically doesn't allow those who are visiting the Ladybug House website whom can't use a mouse or trackpad to view the About Us page.

Suggestions:

2.1.1 - Keyboard
Scripts	Use of device-dependent event handlers i	[G90]	⚠	4	155, 231, 380, 456
	Automatic movement of the focus i	[G90]	❓	1

When creating interactions for the site, avoiding any onclick events will be good to ensure accessibility. For the About Us link on line 155 above, a better alternative would be to have a normal href link like .

Anchor Tags:

2.4.4 - Link Purpose (In Context)
Navegation	Empty links i	[F89]	✗

Lastly, when looking at the list of empty links issues there was an issue I

155. ✗ ❶ ❶ <label for="mobile-folder-toggle-545a7824e4b006857d6da342" class="folder-toggle-label" onclick data-href="/about-us/">About Us</label>
156.

noticed with the anchor tags for the social media icons. Right now, the anchor tags for the social media icon are wrapped around the div elements for the icons. While this still allows the icons to be functional with newer browsers, anyone who is using an older browser to access the site is probably going to run into problems using those icon links.

694. ✖
695.
696. <svg class="sqs-svg-icon--social" viewBox="0 0 64 64">
697. <use class="sqs-use--icon" xlink:href="#twitter-icon"></use>
698. <use class="sqs-use--mask" xlink:href="#twitter-mask"></use>
699. </svg>
700.
701.  ✖ <a href="https://www.facebook.com/ladybughouse" target="_blank" class="sqs-svg-icon--wrapper

Suggestions:

Use font awesome icons when using social media icons for websites might be easier to work with instead of the sqs icons that are being used here if sqs icons are picky with formatting. But, if changing these is too much, a way around this could be to change the div tags inside the anchor tags to a span instead. This could help those with older browsers still access these links. How this would look would be:

```html

        <svg class="sqs-svg-icon--social" viewBox="0 0 64 64">
            <use class="sqs-use--icon" xlink:href="#twitter-icon"></use>
            <use class="sqs-use--mask" xlink:href="#twitter-mask"></use>
        </svg>

But, it still would be better practice to not have an anchor tag wrapped around a div or span tags. An example of how one typically uses font awesome icons would be something like:

```html

Analysis:

Ideally, an image of people working with kids in palliative care would be the main photo at the top that everyone sees when entering the page. Having an inspiration quote surrounding the idea of volunteering could be good for people who are thinking of volunteering but just lake the spiritual inspiration to do so. It would be nice to include a short but detailed text section that would describe a little bit about what volunteers do and how it means not only to the organization but also the kids involved. Finally, it could also be beneficial to have a constantly updated list of current volunteer opening for visitors to browse through to see if any particular task or opening is something they are interested in taking on.

Conclusion:

From the Issue Crawler report in milestone 1, we can see that the other organizations frequently link to other similar organizations. Having Ladybug House link to other organizations and then in turn having those organizations link back to the LBH website, will not only increase people's awareness of Ladybug House in the general public but also increase the website's SEO. By implementing these SEO practices as well as creating a section in the site to deliver more information to visitors, the potential donors should be more inclined to make donations and get the LBH organization up and running.

After going through these individual improvements from milestone 2, we can see that there isn't anything too major that stood out but looking at these areas could really help improve the site. Adding appropriate alt tags to images should be the number one aspect to add to the website as this not only helps with user accessibility but also will help with SEO. Fixing these few issues will really help with the functionality of the Ladybug House website and allow for more user to access the site.

Hopefully, with these implementations in milestone 3, visitors to the LBH website would be encouraged to give back to the community and volunteer. With the flow and design of this mockup page, the goal is to inform the viewer on what being a volunteer means to LBH, and also allows them to easily see what's available and how to sign up. The easier it is for the user to acquire the information they are looking for and understand the material, the more likely they will be willing to volunteer for LBH.

With all the suggestions made throughout this report, the goal was to provide easy to follow detailed analysis on ways the Ladybug House website could be improved. By implementing these suggestions, the website should see an increase in SEO as well as create an ample area for users to gain more information on what Ladybug House represents.
